In an address of mingled humor and seriousness Senator James K. Vardaman of Mississippi, speaking at the Decoration day exercises held in the government printing office at noon, made a plea for individual responsibilynty in life and government.

"The greatest thing beneath the stars is a human being," declared Senator Vardaman, "and this is the greatest government the world has ever known. You are living in a grand and an awful time. Business Connection of Baltimore and Ohio and the C., H. & D.

TOLD BY DANIEL WILLARD AT HEARING BEFORE I. C. C.

Inquiry Has Bearing on the Applica tion Made for Increase in Freight Rates.

DANIEL WILLARD.

Inquiry into the relations between the Baltimore and Ohio and the Cincinnati. Hamilton and Dayton railways was begun today at a hearing before Chairman Harlan of the interstate commerce comnission. The purpose was to develop what, if any, relationship there is between the altimore and Ohio's control of the other line and its need for additional revenue as set out in its application for increased freight rates. Charge have been made in Congress that the Baltimore and Ohio was bearing the bur en of certain "financiering." President Daniel Willard of the Baltinore and Ohio was the first witness called by Special Counsel Louis D. Brandeis. He testified that the Baltimore and Ohio began negotiations to control the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton about August 20, 1909, and that he did not become president of the Cincinnati, Ham ilton and Dayton until 1911. July 1, 1909, when the agreement was made with J. P. Morgan & Co. to take over the Cincinnati Hamilton and Dayton, it was un derstood no cash was to be paid, but that at the end of seven and one-half years the Baltimore and Ohio was to buy from Morgan & Co. substantially all the stock at a price that might then be pre-valling. These shares numbered about 80,600.

Shows Income Deficit

Mr. Brandels read figures to show that the net corporate income deficit of the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton had in creased in the past four years. The increase, Mr. Willard said, was largely due to the large line of equipfirst and refunding mortgage bonds had not proved popular with bankers, and they had not taken them. Mr. Willard testified that it had bee Mr. Willard testified that it had been estimated that control of the Cincinnati. Hamilton and Dayton would be an additional source of profit to the Baltimore and Ohio by increased interchange of business, and that anticipations in that respect had been largely exceeded, but that costs of operation has exceeded the estimate. The flood damage was one cause, he said, and increased rates of pay and taxes were others.

Justifies the Advances Made. In conclusion, Mr. Willard said: 'As matters stand today. I feel the Baltimore and Ohio has been thoroughly justified in the advances it has so far made, and for which I feel it is reasonably well protected, and from all of which the public has had the direct benefit in a better and more effective co-operation
